HONGKONG, 12th September, 1902.

That the United States of America are preparing to take full advantage of the changed conditions of foreign trade with China, resulting from the new commercial treaty, has been abundantly evidenced of late. Within the last few days we have received striking proof of the efforts which the States are preparing to make in order to gain as large a share as possible of the increasing trade out here. At the beginning of this week we learnt that a steamship was being fitted out at Seattle to sail on the 15th November on a six months' cruise to Russia, China, Japan, the Philippines, the Straits Settlements, India, Mauritius, South Africa, Australia, and Hawaii. On board the Oregon is to carry a party of American manufacturers and a collection of exhibits of articles suitable for trade in these countries. This scheme, like that which is to be carried out shortly of an exhibition of American manufactures at Shanghai, seems excellent, and other commercial nations would do well to follow the example of the United States. Our London correspondent, in the telegram which appears in our issue of to-day, announces an even more significant sign of American enterprise. A combination has been formed by the great firms of Messrs. Kountze Brothers, Messrs. Vermilye & Co., Messrs. Brown Brothers & Co., Messrs. A. Belmont & Co. and Cornelius Vanderbilt to run a new line of steamships between New York and the ports of Asia. For the present the company, which will go by the name of the American Asiatic Steamship Company and will be represented in the Far East by the well known firm of SHAW, TOMES & CO., will of necessity charter steamers for its use, but in time will either buy vessels or (as our correspondent reports, but this is doubted by those who should know best in Hongkong) build special boats for the new line. The importance of such a venture cannot be overestimated, and when, as must one day happen, in spite of all the opposition now offered, the Isthmian Canal is actually constructed, the service will be of even greater significance. A point which is not alluded to in our telegram, but which most certainly must be taken into account, is that the firms who make up the new combination are the same as those which are interested in the Canton-Hankow Railway, now actually on its way to becoming a fact. The American Asiatic Company, we learn, in view of the present high rate of freightage, intends to carry out its own material for the construction of the railway, the building of which, we cannot doubt, had some weight at least in determining the various firms interested in starting their new scheme. It will readily be seen how immensely the new project affects Hongkong. If it succeeds we have a most serious competitor for the trade of Canton and the country beyond, but on the other hand, the fresh impetus given to that trade should be such that Hongkong and British merchants must benefit materially from the share which they take in it, unless they are to prove utterly lacking in enterprise. In this connection we should like to ask once more, What of the Kowloon-Canton Railway? Is it ever to become a reality, and if so are the promoters going to wait until Canton trade has been, as far as possible, tempted to go in other directions? It is many years now since we have heard talk in this Colony about a line between Kowloon and Canton, the name of a very prominent firm being mentioned in connection with the scheme. But it is evident that the firm in question is not very anxious about the matter. Did Hongkong belong to another nation interested in the South China trade, doubtless the railway would have been built by now, and probably by the Government itself. Of such an idea would not be in consonance with the history of Hongkong, built up by British merchants in spite of the discouragement of the Government instead of them being aided by Government to the best of its ability. It is easy to point with complacency to what has been achieved here. We had no serious rivals in the past. We have now at least two, one commercial and the other political. Neither America nor France is likely to be half-hearted in carrying out its schemes.

Mr. Brodick has informed Captain Jassal, in answer to a question, that the War Office authorities are experimenting with new beds for guard-rooms, and they hope to be able to add to the soldiers' comfort when on guard. The present bed consists of sloping planks with a wooden head-rest.

At Bombay on the 27th ult. the Parsees beat the Bombay Presidency cricket by 44 runs. The winners scored 131 and 123, while the losers put together 112 and 77. The wicket was soaked by heavy rains and the bowlers consequently held the upper hand throughout. The top score of the match was one of the Parsee team, named Mahomedji, who made 36 and 25; Greig for the Presidency made 43 and 12. Mistry's bowling was most successful.

Commenting on Mr. Rivett-Carnac's financial report on the Budget of Siam, the Bangkok Times says:—Perhaps the most significant statement in the Budget is the announcement that a system has been introduced under which the whole of the revenue derived from the Siamese Malay provinces is in future to be expended solely within the provinces in which it has been collected. Siam is waking up to the needs of the interior, and the backward Malay States are to have the special attention they require.

The Bangkok Times, replying to the Singapore Free Press's representative's remarks on Kelantan, which we quoted the other day, says:—The chief point that our contemporary's representative tries to make is that, when Siam seeks to insist that no import or export duties shall be imposed in Kelantan on goods passing between that port and Bangkok, she is dealing a very serious blow to British trade and violating Article 12. Really it is somewhat difficult to see what Singapore has got to do with the customs arrangement between Bangkok and a Siamese dependency so long as "English merchants and subjects shall have trade and intercourse in future with the same facility and freedom as they have heretofore had." If British vessels were carrying goods between Bangkok and Kelantan they would be the first to object to paying a double duty, and rightly too. By agreeing that a double duty is unnecessary, Bangkok is not "obstructing or interrupting commerce" in Kelantan.

General Fukushima landed in Colombo from the Indra on the 28th ult. He was to leave in a few days' time for Tuluva and India. Later on he was to proceed to Japan via Calcutta.

The Shah, as a beginning of the recognition of the Persian Navy, has just purchased the yacht Selika, which had made an expedition to the Persian Gulf under the command of the Antarctic explorer, Commander de Gelaube.

A despatch dated Simla, August 27, says:—The number of plague deaths in India has increased during the last week to 4,371, the Bombay Presidency reporting 3,111, Mysore 614, Madras Presidency 163, United Provinces 195, and Hyderabad 143.

A Reuter's telegram from Hamburg, dated August 7, says:—Exports of the Hamburg-America Line and of the North-German Lloyd have proved and signed jointly minutes to the effect that the steamer Deutschland, of the Hamburg-America Line, still holds the record of the fastest trip across the North Atlantic, and that the calculation made by the master of the steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm, of the North-German Lloyd Line, according to which this steamer should have beaten the Deutschland, was erroneous.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times, writing on the 7th ult. with regard to Germany's attitude over the Shanghai garrison question, says:—The truth underlying all this leather and prunella is that the German Government, for reasons of its own, is in no hurry to withdraw its garrison from Shanghai. The argument that gratitude to the Yangtze Viceroy demands the withdrawal of the Western troops is not likely to meet with much response in Germany, the home of Realpolitik. The German Press has been lavish enough in its compliments to the two great Chinese statesmen, but when they ask for practical recognition of their services the Gegenwart of their request is ignored, and it is even suggested that the question has been raised at this early stage through English jealousy of German commercial competition.

GYMKHANA.

A gymkhana will be held on the Happy Valley Racecourse on Saturday, 11th October, weather permitting. The events comprise a mile flat race, open to walers not exceeding 14 lbs. 3 inches, with penalties for previous winners and allowances for unplaced ponies; a steeplechase, open, height not to exceed 14.3; a jumping competition over hurdles, water, in and out and post and rail—limit as to height 14.3; tent-pegging; a polo pony race; and a costume race. The official programme will be published later. We are informed that practice jumps are to be erected on the place of ground to the west of the football ground at Wongchienong, so that intending competitors will have the opportunity of schooling their horses over jumps similar to those to be used on the day of the gymkhana.

THE SUNKEN "PAKSHAN"

Considerable progress, we are informed, has of late been made in the operations for raising the a.s. Pakshan (1,976 tons) which sank in the Harbour opposite the Sailors' Home on 2nd June. She lies on her side in about fifty feet of water. Messrs. Morton & Gibson, who have undertaken the work of salvage, have found, contrary to general expectation, that the bottom is hard with only a thin layer of mud, the operations thus being rendered easier. But as it is, the silt has caused the divers some trouble. Meanwhile one of the two slings by which the raising of the vessel is proposed to be effected has been put into position and the other is almost through. When the slings are in position the vessel will be hauled over on to an even keel and then raised by lighters in the usual way. Messrs. Morton & Gibson are to be congratulated on the expedition and success with which their venture has so far been attended.

A PAINFUL INCIDENT.

A peculiarly painful mishap took place on Wednesday evening in the harbour, by which an infant narrowly escaped drowning. Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Fittcock, Kowloon Dock, had crossed over in a launch about five o'clock, bringing with them their three-month-old baby boy for the purpose of having him christened at the Cathedral. The child was being carried by the ayah. On reaching Queen's Statue wharf the party proceeded to disembark. In stepping from the launch on to the wharf stairs, the ayah missed her footing and in saving herself she let the baby slip from her arms and fall into the water between the boat and the wharf. Fortunately the child did not strike against anything in his descent, but fell clear into the water. Mr. Fittcock immediately jumped into the harbour to save his child, and, happily to relate, was successful in getting him on dry ground in a few seconds. The anxious parents at once boarded the launch again and made all haste back to the Docks, everything meantime being done that could be done to prevent ill consequences to the infant. At the Docks, medical assistance was instantly summoned, and on the arrival of the doctors, the father and mother were relieved to learn that their boy was little the worse for his adventure. It seems that the baby's light clothing served to keep him from sinking during the few moments that he was in the water.

THE TANJONG PAGAR MURDER CASE—DEATH-SENTENCE.

The Frenchman Joseph Gouin, an escaped convict from New Caledonia, was sentenced to death at the Assizes to-day for murdering a Chinese ricksha-puller at Tanjong Pagar on the 6th July.

NEW AMERICAN-ASIATIC LINE—MESSRS. SHEWAN, TOMES & CO. THE AGENTS.

The American Asiatic Steamship Company is about to start a service of steamers between New York and Asiatic ports, using chartered vessels until specially built liners are ready. The promoters of the new company include the following firms:—Messrs. Kountze, Vermilye, Brown, Belmont, and Cornelius Vanderbilt. The Oriental agents will be Messrs. Shewan, Tomes and Co.

[The American Asiatic Steamship Company has just been registered in New York. The full designations of the firms mentioned are Messrs. Kountze Brothers, Messrs. Vermilye & Co., Messrs. Brown Brothers & Co., Messrs. A. Belmont & Co., and Cornelius Vanderbilt. Messrs. Shewan, Tomes & Co. are the managers of the Company in New York as well as the Eastern agents. The above are the firms interested in the Canton-Hankow Railway, the material for which will be carried from America by the Company's steamers. Vessels will be chartered as required, and the Company may buy others. Our correspondent's statement about "specially built liners" is in the circumstances hardly likely to be accurate, we learn. The Company elect to ship the railway material by their own steamers because of the present high rate of freightage.—Ed. D.P.]

THE MURDER OF A SINGAPORE RICKSHA-COOLIE.

The hearing of the case at Singapore against Joseph Gouin, a Frenchman, indicted on a charge of the murder of a ricksha coolie at Tanjong Pagar by cutting his throat with a razor, was fixed for Monday, the 8th inst. Mr. Lowell, barrister-at-law, was assigned to defend the prisoner, and a special jury was to be empanelled. As will be seen the accused has been sentenced to death. Gouin, it may be remembered, arrived in Singapore by the German mail steamer Tanglin, having been picked up off the coast of New Guinea, with three other French convicts who had escaped from Noumea, the capital of New Caledonia, in a stolen boat. The German steamer kindly (7) landed them at Singapore. Early on the morning of the 6th July Gouin murdered a ricksha-coolie with a razor at Tanjong Pagar. The coolie was able to leave his ricksha and run to the station, where he died. The police followed the blood-stains and found Gouin walking along Keppel Road. He was saturated with blood and smelt of drink. Gouin was a well-built man, between 40 and 50 years old. Brought up at the Police Court, he reserved his defence until the Assizes.

A steam launch belonging to a battleship recently sprung a leak while crossing Portsmouth Harbour, and rapidly sank. Near by an old salt was leisurely rowing a boat, but he made no attempt to come to the rescue. The launch's crew of three, however, managed to swim to the boat, and as they scrambled on board one said to the boatman, "Why didn't you come and give us a hand? Didn't you see we were sinking?" "Lor' bless ye," said the boatman, stolidly, "I thought yer craft was one o' them bloomin' submarines."

THE SINGAPORE WATER FAMINE.

As a keynote to how some ignorant and doubtless mischievous Chinese feel on the matter, the Straits Times remarks, it may be noted that a notice was posted upon the walls of the Chinese protestants' last night offering a reward for the Governor's head! The police, it may be added, are not in the least alarmed over this interesting incident, and little official attention has been paid to it.

The same paper also says:—The inevitable occurred last evening (the 2nd inst.) when two opposing parties of Chinamen and Malays—both clamouring for water—entered into a gruesome conflict at the hydrant opposite the Victoria Bridge School, Victoria Street, and the fight for the water lasted for upwards of half an hour. The quarrelling started at about half-past four o'clock, half an hour before the time for turning on the resper hour's supply of water. All the men had buckets, and of course the row originated in a scramble for the first serve. In less time than it takes to write it, buckets were crashing on the heads of the water-collectors with a loud din, sticks were freely requisitioned, and stones were flying about in hundreds. Several men were slightly injured. One was taken to the hospital by the police, and released.

The Singapore Free Press of the 4th inst. writes:—One fact with regard to the water famine seems to have hitherto escaped notice, and that is that last week the death rate was lower than that of the corresponding week last year, the figures being respectively 43.65 and 49.88. Considering that the rate has been very high of late, the drop at such a time as the present cannot fail to be hailed as a satisfactory sign. There is no doubt that when the rain comes, as come it must in good earnest, the mortality returns will show a decided increase on the present figures. It is generally so in the case of heavy rains after a prolonged drought.

THE BEACHCOMBER.

Many people have been again complaining of late about the unwelcome and unsavoury attentions forced upon them by beachcombers, of whom there seems to be a plague more than ordinarily in the Colony at present. They make a practice of insinuating themselves into offices and other places of business and entreating the occupant for "15 cents for God's sake" (15 cents can buy a substantial tot of whisky in the outlying drink saloons). The police do all they can to deal with the nuisance, but really some more stringent remedy is required than the benevolent punishment of the House of Detention in curbing the licence enjoyed by these undesirable visitors.

CAVALRY ARMS.

The Pioneer is advocating the arming of cavalry with the rifle and bayonet instead of the carbine, a suggestion which will receive support from many officers of experience in South Africa. In regard to the best arm for the cavalryman, Major H. P. Walton, of the South African Constabulary, writing to the Journal of the Indian Union Service Institution, suggests that he should carry a bayonet on his person and a sword on the saddle. The sword should not be too weighty, but a good thrusting weapon. The shock-tactics of cavalry may be to some extent obsolete, but as a pursuing force, and sometimes when a charge has to be undertaken, nothing can make up for the want of a sword. Instances have been known in which our men have got right up against the burglar, and the want of a sword and some charging weapon with which they might ride him down has been much felt.

A RUSSIAN VIEW OF LEKIN ABOLITION.

The St. Petersburg journal Novoe Vremya, writing on the 30th July upon the abolition of lekin, dwells at some length upon the great obstacles which these duties placed in the way of trade in China, and is confident that their abolition will be followed by a great and immediate development of the Chinese market. European goods and European traders will penetrate into the most distant and inaccessible corners of the Celestial Empire. The Russian organ is, however, by no means confident that this is a matter for congratulation. "The terrible events of the year before last have rendered it inevitable that our first thought should be how to remove the causes which led to these events and to lessen the gulf which separates the Chinese people from the representatives of a higher civilisation. Needless to say, the abolition of lekin duties does not serve these ends. England, to whom belongs the honour of bringing about this great reform, has had no thought for anything except her own commercial advantages. These advantages she has attained. By abolishing lekin China has thrown the door wide open to foreign trade. But what will be the result of this? Will not the host of foreigners who will pour into the country with the development of trade call forth fresh demonstrations of hatred on the part of the Chinese towards their uninvited guests? Notwithstanding the cruel lessons of 1900, Europe has not been taught to change her ways, and is still governed in her relations with China by cold considerations of profit and loss. The Chinese character still remains a riddle to her, and she does not find time to worry about the solution. But how is it possible for her to escape paying for this mistake in torrents of blood?"

A French investigator finds that plants are sensitive to certain poisons in quantities so minute that they completely baffled chemical analysis. For instance, a plant showed the effects of sulphate of copper dissolved in 700,000,000 times its weight in water—a state of dilution scarcely imaginable, much less detectable by ordinary methods. This raises the presumption that the character of the vegetation of a country may depend on minute quantities of toxic substances present in the soil.

POLICE COURT.

Thursday, 11th September.

BEFORE MR. F. A. HAZELAND (POLICE MAGISTRATE).

ALLEGED ATTEMPTED FRAUD ON THE HONGKONG AND SHANGHAI BANK.

The hearing of the charges against Saul Levy was resumed at ten o'clock.

George Henry Ardron, the European in charge of the Savings Bank department of the Bank, said he did not necessarily see the cash or notes received from depositors; that was the duty of the shroff, Wai Ying. He knew the defendant as a depositor in the Savings Bank; his pass-book showed that he had $344.70 to his credit. The $344 was money deposited between 15th April, 1902, and 7th August, 1902, inclusive, and the 70 cents was the amount of interest; nothing had been drawn out by the defendant. At 10.30 a.m. on 3rd September witness saw the defendant standing at the counter of the Savings Bank. The shroff came to witness with a $50 bill purporting to be issued by the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, and drew his attention to it; the colour was a very pale heliotrope, like that of the thirteen notes in Court. The defendant was standing at the counter, where witness left him whilst he took the note to the cash department. When he went back the defendant was still there, and witness afterwards heard him say to the shroff something like "Sassoon"; the shroff replied to the effect that he was busy. About twenty minutes afterwards words were again exchanged between them, but what they were witness could not say. Subsequently witness went round to the defendant and asked him what he wanted, and he replied, "I go Sassoon; I come back one o'clock." Later, the defendant left the Bank with Sergeant Watt, who returned afterwards with thirteen notes, also purporting to have been issued by the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank.

By Mr. Hastings—The defendant was about an hour in the Bank, waiting at the same place. During that time no steps were taken to prevent him from leaving the Bank, except that he was being watched by the Bank's Chinese detective. Witness was of opinion that the defendant did not know he was being watched.

Ho Wing Chun, second shroff at the Bank, said Wai Ying, the Savings Bank shroff, handed him a note of the face value of $50 which he examined and passed over to Mr. Sharp, who looked at it and, in company with witness, went to Mr. Peter's desk and gave the note to him. Mr. Sharp handed the note to Mr. Peter.

Augustus Sharp, cashier, corroborated this evidence, and also said that when he and the last witness were at Mr. Peter's desk some one handed him (witness) another note similar to the first. He handed both to Mr. Peter.

George Charles Peter, chief accountant, said he was positive that the second shroff and Mr. Sharp handed him a "note each." The notes produced in Court were forgeries.

By Mr. Hastings—The notes were very good forgeries, and likely to deceive anyone without technical knowledge on the subject. The signatures of Mr. Jackson and Mr. Sassoon were excellent forgeries.

Hs. Worship—Sir Thomas Jackson.

Mr. Hastings—Sir Thomas Jackson. I beg his pardon.

Cross-examination resumed—The two points by which witness knew that the two notes handed to him were forgeries were that the colour was lighter and that the numerals were identical.

Mr. Hastings (showing witness one of the notes)—Why does the number lead you to think that this note is a forgery?

Witness—Because both the numbers were the same.

Mr. Hastings—But this one note—would the number of it tell you it was a forgery?

Witness—No.

In answer to another question, witness said the notes were more likely to mislead anyone who had no knowledge of English.

Sergeant Major Golab said he acted as interpreter when the defendant was first brought to the Central Police Station by Sergeant Watt. He spoke Hindustani, which the defendant appeared to understand, except when the last question was put. His answer to it was, after it had been asked two or three times, "I don't know; God knows."

Mr. Master—What was the first question you put to him?

Mr. Hastings objected generally to evidence being given of questions put to a prisoner by the police and the answers given by him, except under the proper circumstance of his having been cautioned.

The question was disallowed.

This concluded the case for the prosecution, and Mr. Hastings briefly addressed the Court. The defendant, he said, was charged under Sections 13 and 14 of Ordinance 6 of 1865, and it was an essential element of the charges that the defendant should have known that the notes were forged. The onus of such proof lay with the prosecution. The case for the defence was this:—The defendant, a hawker, residing at 12, Stanton Street, had been living in the Colony for about eighteen months. He had a family of several children, one of them the little girl who had been charged with the defendant and another a little boy, ten years of age, who went round the various public-houses and sold flowers. On one particular day he went out, as usual, at 6.30 in the evening for the purpose of selling his flowers in Queen's Road. He saw a fellow holding a Chinaman in arrest, and stopped to look. In the Chinaman's pocket he noticed a small parcel, and later in the day he returned by the same route and saw a fellow carrying a little bundle lying on the side of the road. The boy picked it up, examined it, and found that the contents were bank notes. He took his bundle home to his father, who was then lying sick in bed, and witnesses would be called to prove that when he reached home the boy burst into the house shouting out that he had found some bank-notes in the street.

The little boy in question, an intelligent-looking fellow whose head just showed over the rail of the witness-box, was then called, and assured his Worship that he knew the pains and penalties that would be visited upon little boys who told lies; they would go to jail, he opined. His evidence was a corroboration of what had been submitted by Mr. Hastings. The notes, he said, were given by his father to his sister Mollie, who put them in the box where they were found by the sergeant of police.

By Mr. Master—Witness saw the notes as he was walking along the road. He saw about twenty Chinese passengers at the spot where he picked them up. The inkling had the Chinaman by the shoulder, and about fifteen to twenty people were following close behind; witness waited a little to watch them, and then went away. He saw the bundle in the coolie's hand plainly, and could see it was made up of notes; the crowd present and the inkling could see the notes just as clearly. When he subsequently picked up the notes, he thought they might have been those held in the hand of the Chinaman. When he gave the notes to his father he did not tell him anything about the inkling and his prisoner. His father did not count the notes; he opened the bundle and looked through it, and then said there were fifteen dollars.

Re-examined by Mr. Hastings—When witness noticed the bundle in the hand of the Chinaman, he could see the contents were notes. The bundle, he found, was smaller than the one the Chinaman had.

When his evidence was being read over, the witness corrected a statement that he had seen the inkling and the Chinaman walking on the street and then take to the pavement, where the notes were found; they walked on the street all the time he saw them, and did not cross over to the pavement.

After further evidence, the case was again remanded.

V. R. C. AQUATIC SPORTS.

FIRST DAY.

The first day of the Victoria Recreation Club's annual aquatic sports opened yesterday and was attended with very favourable weather. The spectators—entirely of the male sex, as is usual on the opening day—were numerous and appreciative, and were provided with excellent sport in the six events down for competition. The results were as follows:—

1.—HALF MILE CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE COLONY. Open to all Comers. 1st Prize presented by H. E. Major-General Sir W. Gassioigne, K.C.M.G., 2nd Prize presented by Messrs. M. Price and Co.

1. N. H. Alves.
2. A. V. Barros.

Time, 19 min. 55 sec.

An erratic race, some of the competitors going right out of the course, which may be taken to mean a comparatively straight line. The race was out on a flagged buoy in the open harbor, and the sun cast on the water a glare unfavorable to the competitors and spectators. On the way out a junk crossed the course and on the return journey a sampan almost fouled Barros and Alves. The former was beaten in the last fifty yards, Alves thus winning a tiring race.

2.—VETERANS' RACE, TWO LENGTHS (Handicap). Open to competitors over 30 years of age. 1st Prize presented by Commodore Robinson, R.N., 2nd Prize presented.

1. M. McIver.
2. M. A. Bazzok.

Time, 75 sec.

An exciting race, McIver, the "Scotch consul," just winning on the post.

3.—FLUORING.—1st Prize presented by R. H. B. Mitchell, Esq., 2nd Prize presented.

1. M. A. Bazzok (50 ft.).
2. A. Humphreys (47 ft.).
3. A. M. Soares (46 ft. 11 in.).

Bazzok made a good spring-off, and the impetus thus gained enabled him to beat Humphreys, who was regarded as a sure winner.

4.—FOUR LENGTHS (Handicap). Two Prizes. 1st Prize presented by J. R. M. Smith, Esq., 2nd Prize presented.

1. C. M. S. Alves.
2. A. Humphreys.
3. F. P. Bain.

Time, 1 min. 58 sec.

Alves' steady stroke at the start augured well for his success, and the predictions of his supporters were verified, for he won a good race from Humphreys by a length.

5.—FOUR LENGTHS (Army, Navy, and Police). Post entries allowed, non-members. Two Prizes.

1. Lance-Corporal A. Baker, R. A. M. C. 2.
2. Bandman Gregory, R. W. F.

Time, 1 min. 43 sec.

Baker and Gregory set the pace for the others the whole way, but the latter found Baker too much for him, although he made a determined effort to alter the result.

6.—TWO LENGTHS (Handicap). 1st Prize presented by W. D. Dixon, Esq., 2nd Prize presented.

1. W. T. Andrews.
2. C. M. S. Alves.

Time, 57 1/4 sec.

SECOND HEAT.

1. O. R. Chanoy.
2. A. Humphreys.

Time, 54 1/2 sec.

THIRD HEAT.

1. H. S. Holmes.
2. J. H. R. Hanco.

Time, 54 5/8 sec.

WHAT DR. LEYDS WILL SAY.

London, 23rd August.

The Hague correspondent of the Daily Mail states that Dr. Leyds, during his visit, pressed Dr. Leyds to account for the money Mr. Kruger had taken with him when he fled from South Africa.

AS TROUBLESHOOTER AS MR. O'BRIEN'S TROUBLES.

London, 24th August.

The Boer General, having stated that they declined to witness the Naval Review owing to the shabbiness of their attire.

MILITARY CHANGES.

London, 23rd August.

A special Army Order provides that the following leave South Africa between now and March, 1903: Four regiments of Cavalry, four Batteries of Horse Artillery, three Brigades Divisions of Field Artillery, twelve Battalions of Infantry to India, five Companies of Garrison Artillery, ten regiments of Infantry to various parts of the empire. Three regiments of Infantry arrive in South Africa in the same period.

THE BOER PRISONERS.

Simla, 26th August.

The steamer Ionian sails from Madras in the first week in September with repatriated Boer prisoners, taking 115 Boers from Wellington, 428 from Bellary, 356 from Trichinopoly, 87 from Umballa, Dugabai, and Colaba and 18 from Bombay. The Wellington and Trichinopoly camps will thereafter be closed, the remaining prisoners in the latter being transferred to Bellary to await their turn for despatch to South Africa.

Simla, 27th August.

The number of Boer prisoners sailing in the Ionian is increased to 1,300, Umballa, Solon, and Dagabai sending 256 extra and Wellington 14. One thousand will be landed at Durban and three hundred at Cape Town.

"Not entitled passages" from India to South Africa will be granted under certain conditions to the families of officers likely to remain for some time in the latter country.

GENERAL NEWS.

HOME POLITICS.

London, 23rd August.

The Radical Press is exultant over the result of the Sevenoaks election, which it claims as a moral victory. The Daily News says that this is the third notice the Government has had to quit. The Standard believes that there were numerous Conservative abstentions owing to the Income Tax. Even the Morning Post is pessimistic, and declares that the Government has not succeeded in rousing any enthusiasm apart from the war.

THE SHAH'S LEAVE-TAKING.

London, 24th August.

The Shah has bidden farewell to the King at Cowes. The leave-taking was remarkably cordial on both sides. The whole visit of the Shah has been a distinct success.

THE SOUDAN.

London, 24th August.

Colonel Mahon, Governor of Kordofan, has been suddenly recalled from leave, and has started for his capital instanter.

AUSTRALIAN DEFENCE.

London, 24th August.

The Times severely criticises the statement of Sir John Forrest, that Australia is quite able to take care of herself with regard to defence.

ROBERTS AND KITCHENER.

London, 26th August.

Lord Roberts and General French have been presented with the freedom of Canterbury where they were enthusiastically welcomed.

London, 26th August.

Lord Kitchener has booked his passage by the Egypt sailing on the 7th November, but will probably only join her at Ismailia after his visit to Khartoum.

BRITISH HOSPITALITY VINDICATED.

London, 26th August.

It has been officially announced that the Government has decided that the Imperial Exchequer shall defray all the charges incurred in England in connection with the reception and entertainment of the representative visitors from India. The papers welcome the removal of a serious and legitimate grievance.

THE ITALIAN ARMY.

London, 26th August.

As a result of experiences gained during the Boer war, the Italian Minister of War proposes the reduction of military service to two years.

INDIAN UNIVERSITIES.

London, 26th August.

The Chronicle in discussing the question of Indian Universities says the Babu is alone worthy of blame if he is incompetent and discontented, but the system on which he is being trained is largely responsible. It strongly advocates residential arrangements and healthy corporate life as at Aligarh, enabling the principal and staff to leave their own stamp on the students' characters.

BIG STRIKE AT FLORENCE.

London, 1st September.

A strike on a large scale is in progress at Florence and fighting has taken place. The safety of the city was secured with difficulty. Troops are now maintaining order.

HOME CRICKET.

London, 26th August.

Sussex beat Essex by 110 runs.

London, 27th August.

Yorkshire beat Kent by nine wickets. Somersetshire beat Surrey by three wickets. Warwickshire beat Gloucestershire by six wickets. The Australians beat Middlesex by six wickets. Lancashire v. Leicestershire has been drawn.

A BRUSSELS TO OSTEND RACE.

London, 28th August.

A great Military ride from Brussels to Ostend, of 84 miles, was won by a Frenchman in 6 hours and 55 minutes. Frenchmen also secured the chief places. The horse of the only Englishman competing expired 500 yards from the goal.

CHINA IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

On the 6th August Mr. J. Walton asked for information from the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs as to whether, in connexion with the handing over of Tientsin to Chinese jurisdiction, the Government would secure the handing back by Russia to China of Newchwang. In the treaty port of Newchwang there was a British trade of no less than £5,000,000 annually; and it would have been well within the ability of the Government of that strong naval force on the China Station to take steps to protect British interests there. The Government ought now to secure that Newchwang should be handed back to China jurisdiction by the Russians simultaneously with the handing back of Tientsin, and that the railway from Tientsin to Shantung should be handed back simultaneously with the railway from Shantung to Newchwang. He would also be glad to have further information with regard to the arbitration as to the lands taken possession of by the Russians at Tientsin. He hoped they would be told that the reference was of a limited character. It must not be forgotten that when Russia occupied the railway station at Tientsin there were documents in a safe in the station showing the title of the Northern Chinese Railway Company to the lands, and that safe was forced and rifled of its contents. That important fact ought to be brought forward and pressed. As to the conclusion of the new commercial treaty, members on both sides of the House were much gratified by the news which came a week or ten days ago which seemed to point to the conclusion of an equitable treaty, calculated to extend trade generally throughout the Chinese Empire. In the first place, he would like to know whether steps were being taken to secure the insertion of what he might call a most-favoured-nation clause in regard to railway construction. Another point was the extreme desirability of arriving at some agreement, as between the various Powers undertaking the construction of railways in China, that equal railway rates should be accorded to the nationals of all Powers over all railways in China. Connected with this matter was the question of the regulation of trade on the inland watersways. He hoped the Under-Secretary would be able to give a definite assurance as to the settlement of this vital question. Present regulations only allowed British ships to trade between two treaty ports. They were not allowed to take in or discharge cargo at any intervening places. In such circumstances they could not trade profitably. Care ought, also, to be taken to secure that the same import duties should be levied on the land frontiers of China as were levied on goods taken into China by sea. Goods coming in over the land frontier were only coming in over the third of a 5 per cent. duty required to pay the third of a 5 per cent. duty. This right was not of much importance to England because she only had an entry over the Burmese frontier, and the trade from that direction was not large; but France and Russia were in a very different position, and the difference in their favour would be some 3 or 4 per cent.—a heavy handicap on British trade. Another important matter was the establishment of their own in China. In this way postal packets were introduced without payment of the proper duties. He would be glad to know that the British Government held it to be the right and prerogative of the Chinese Government to conduct the postal and telegraph service throughout the Empire. The only remaining question he would refer to was the question of the lehin. He was not so sanguine as to what was likely to be achieved. This matter as some writers in the Press appeared to be, but he thought the noble lord should give the House the fullest information he could. For his own part he could not understand how the provincial Exchequers were to be reorganised for what they would lose by the abolition. With regard to the addition to the burden of the indemnity paid by the Chinese owing to the depreciation in silver, he had heard with satisfaction the statement made by the Foreign Secretary that in another place the question of reducing increased facilities for British trade in China as of infinitely greater importance than the amount of indemnity this country received, and that they were proposing to accept payment of the indemnity at the same exchange value for the tal as prevailed at the time the protocol was concluded. That protocol did not confer on this or any other country the right to occupy Shanghai as a great trading port, and having regard to the splendid and enlightening action of the Viceroy of the Yangtze which had maintained perfect order in that district during the recent disturbances, he thought the nations were bound to comply with the terms and conditions of the protocol, just as they expected the Chinese to comply with them, and withdraw their forces at the earliest possible moment from Shanghai. He regarded the continued occupation of Shanghai as a great danger to the peace of China, and he hoped the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs would give the House the reports in the new papers that his Majesty's Government and the Governments of the United States, France, and Japan had expressed their willingness to consider the question of the early evacuation of the place. This country had 250,000 Chinese subjects in the international settlement at Shanghai. It had always been the recognised practice that no arrest should be made in the international settlement until the mixed Court had decided that a prima facie case had been made out against the person whom it was desired to arrest. But recently a Chinese-British subject had been arrested in the international settlement on a warrant signed by the Senior Consul at the instance of the French. He hoped his Majesty's Government would convey to the British Consul who had weakly become a party to that illegal arrest their disapproval of his conduct. He was glad to recognise that British commercial interests in China were receiving more vigorous attention from his Majesty's Government now than had been the case two or three years ago. The peace in South Africa had freed our hands, and enabled us, while avoiding aggression, to uphold our just rights in China. It was, he remarked in conclusion, of happy augury that members on both sides, to the number of over 220, had banded themselves together for the promotion of British commercial interests all over the world.

Viscount Cranborne said that every discussion on China divided itself into three great divisions:—(1) the old history of the war; (2) the question which arose at the conclusion of the war for restoring the normal state of things; and (3) the future policy of this country. With all these topics the hon. member had dealt. The hon. gentleman spoke with commendation of the attitude of the Government in old times in allowing the Russian occupation of Newchwang. He apparently forgot the circumstances in which that occupation took place. He must remember that all the Powers were agreed in common action in order to save the Legations and to avenge the outrage which had been committed against us; and each Power advanced in its own way. We advanced from the sea; the Russians advanced from the Manchurian frontier; and, naturally enough, as Newchwang lay on the line of that advance, they occupied the place. The hon. member asked when Newchwang was going to be restored to the Chinese. The hon. member knew as much about this as he did. In the Manchurian agreement the evacuation of the Russians of provinces in China was divided into three divisions. A part was to be evacuated in the next six months; another part in the course of another period of six months; and the remainder in another period of six months. In the course of the first six months Russia agreed to evacuate all that part in which the railway from Shantung to Newchwang lay; in the course of the next six months they agreed to evacuate that province in which the town of Newchwang was; and they agreed in the third period of six months to evacuate the remainder. That was the present state of things. The railway to Newchwang lay in that province of Manchuria which would be handed back in the first period of six months under the Manchurian agreement. Reference was next made to the indemnity. The effects of this country had directed as far as possible to restore the normal state of things in China as soon as possible and with, on the whole, as little onerous conditions as possible. No doubt of course for which the large figure, a figure of course for which the hon. member was responsible; and since then the fall in silver had made it difficult for the Chinese to pay. The Government had taken note of that fact, and they had made a proposition to the Powers to mitigate the severity of the debt which the Chinese had to pay. Whether that proposal would bear fruit or not he could not at present say. At any rate the hon. member might be comforted by the thought that the British Government must not do more than its duty in that respect. The same observation applied to the evacuation of Shanghai. The Government recognised that the sooner Shanghai was evacuated by the international troops the better. There was no reason why they should stay, and the Government had proposed to the Powers occupying Shanghai that there should be an evacuation. But the House would realise that it was impossible for Great Britain to evacuate Shanghai. We must have in that respect, as in all other respects, the most favoured nation treatment; and if we evacuate Shanghai, as the Government proposed to do, it would be on the condition that the other Powers evacuated Shanghai at the same time. The hon. member asked about the arrest of certain Chinese, and the demand of the French Government that they should be tried before a French Court rather than a mixed Court. That raised a question of interest, and of some importance which he would not attempt to discuss. He said that the French attitude apparently was that where the prosecutor or the plaintiff, as the case might be, resided there was the place where the trial ought to take place. The Government, on the other hand, contended that where the prisoner or defendant resided there was the place where the trial ought to be taken place. That was a question which he decided after negotiation, and the negotiations were proceeding. The reference to commercial treaties belonged to future policy, to the policy of reconstruction in China which this country since the war was pursuing. It was impossible for him to tell the House, as he hoped to do, fully what the commercial treaty contained. The Government had entertained hopes that before now the negotiations would have arrived at a successful result. He might say, however, that they were to some extent surprised at finding that the difficulties which presented themselves in arriving at a conclusion on the commercial treaty did not appear so formidable as at one time they seemed to be. This was largely due to the intervention of the two great patriotic Viceroy, and he should like to join in the terms of commendation used in regard to them. The difficulties, however, were great and the first suggestion made by Sir James Mackay certainly did not meet the views either of the Chinese or of the commercial community in this country. In the first place, under the scheme originally presented to the Government, the illegal charges of lehin which was imposed on all merchandise in transit through China. The method which Sir James Mackay originally proposed was that in return for the abolition of the lehin there should be a certain increase in the duties on the import of foreign goods at the ports of entry. But if the Government had agreed to that, and if there had been no practical redress in the case of Chinese default, the last result would have been, worse than the first. Another difficulty was that as the proposal stood it was protective to Chinese industry against British industry, because it imposed heavy duties against foreign trade and no corresponding relief against the Chinese home trade. And, lastly, there was a want of proportion between the amount of money which the Chinese were to lose by the abolition of the lehin and that amount of money which would be gained in lieu thereof by the increase of Customs duty. The disparity was so great that it was evident that no such arrangement could be made on that basis. These three difficulties constituted the problem for which Sir James Mackay had to find a solution, and the Government had every reason to hope that he had found it. There was still the hope that he had found it, and if it was a final conclusion of the treaty, and if it was a task which reflected no slight credit on his skill as a negotiator and his knowledge as commercial representative of Great Britain in China. (Hear, hear.) It was not accurate to run down the position of Great Britain in China as some hon. members did. The proportion of trade agreed to it would be held in 1898. There was a slight diminution, but it amounted to very little, so that in spite of all the troubles through which we had gone, in spite of the assertions made by hon. members and other critics of the Government that the position of Great Britain was always retreating further into the background, our trade maintained almost the same percentage in 1900 as in 1898. In the amount of railway concession which this country had obtained we stood at least as high as any other competing Power in China. The hon. member wanted us to have a most favoured nation clause in regard to railways. He was not at all sure that such a thing was practicable, but the matter would be considered. Every railway had features of its own which were the subject of special bargaining in each case; and whether it was possible to lay down that whenever any advantages were given to any country in respect of a particular railway concession those advantages should be extended to every other railway concession throughout China, he was not sure that it was a practicable proposal.

CHESS NOTES.

BY L. Y. Z.

The position in the remaining Hongkong-Singapore cable game is now as follows:—
White (Hongkong), K at Q2, B at K3, P at K2, Kt 2, KB 5, and K 6 (=6 pieces); Black (Singapore), K at K KB sq, B at K Kt sq, P at K2, K3, QB 5, Q Kt 4, and QR 5 (=7 pieces). Black to move.

The Gambit Tournament at the Hongkong Chess Club has resulted as follows:—P. C. de Souza 10, P. W. Sergeant (penalised 2 points) 9,
M. J. Danenberg 8, R. H. Newborn 5, Maximim
12. Three other competitors entered, but retired before the completion of the contest, forfeiting their remaining games. Mr. de Souza thus wins the prize. The openings selected were the Evans and Danish Gambite.

The club's season begins next month, when it is hoped that members will be able to attend more regularly than through the summer months. If the anticipated return of Mr. H.
E. Pollock takes place, an impetus should be given to local chess-playing, for Mr. Pollock was an enthusiastic supporter of the club up to the time when he left Hongkong.

The latest scores of the leader in the Hanover Tournament, which had then reached the fifteenth round, were:—Janowski, 14 points; Pillsbury, Wolf, and Atkins, 10;
Mieses, 9; Napier, and Olland, 8; Marshall, Swiderski, and Tschigorin, 8. The two last-named and Napier had made a great advance during their recent games, Tschigorin in the course of four rounds rising from 14th to 8th, bracketed with two others, a place far more suited to his play. Napier rose from 12th to 6th in the same period. The most startling events of the last few rounds have been the defeat of Janowski by Mason (whose score was only 4½ at the end of the 15th round) and the collapse of Gausberg before Atkins in eight moves, the older player making a far oversight. Atkins has done brilliantly so far and shown that he possesses more stamina than he was credited with. Mieses' and Süchting have each drawn 8 games.

The two minor tournaments at Hanover have resulted as follows:—Section A, Herr John (Berlin) won, Mr. Louman (London) being only 6th; Section B, Herr M. Fleischmann (Budapest) won.

Schlechter gives the curious reason for not competing at Hanover, that he has not yet recovered from his victory over Janowski at Carlsbad, which is rather reversing the usual order of things. As a rule, it is the loser in a chess match who is ill. And, oddly enough, Janowski is playing in splendid form at Hanover.

Pillsbury won only 3 games in his blindfold series at Hanover last month. He, however, drew 11 games and lost 7. The exhibition commenced at two o'clock in the afternoon, and was not concluded until two o'clock of the following morning, an adjournment of half an hour having taken place at 6 p.m. for refreshments. At the close of the performance Pillsbury received quite an ovation, and he was carried from the hall on the shoulders of enthusiastic admirers.
The feat was certainly a remarkable one, but it is to be feared that Pillsbury jeopardises his chances of pre-eminence by indulging in such exhibitions. At any rate, they would seem to be better avoided during the strain of a big contest like that at Hanover.

The great annual match between Europeans and Colonials, at Cape Town, was played this year 8½ sides and was won by Europeans by 74 to 48, each pair playing two games. A new club, we see, has been formed at Pretoria.

Louis R. Eisenberg, the young Russian chess master, who competed in the last international tournament at Monte Carlo and there achieved a notable victory over Pillsbury, the American champion, was the guest of the Manhattan Chess Club, New York, last month.

Austria-Hungary seems at the present moment to be the country above all others of chess-players. No other nation can put into the field so strong a quartette as Maroczy, Schlechter, Wolf, and Mieses. Germany used to be well represented, but now there is no one to touch Tarrasch, and he plays but rarely. It is rather curious that in these days of telegraph and telephone, international matches are not more common.

In the Hanover tournament the Austrian player Mieses has boldly offered the Danish Gambit. We submit two games, one of which he won against Marshall, while the other he lost to Tschigorin. Marshall appeared to be doing well but under-estimated the attack and finally declined a draw by 30... Q-B3. Tschigorin, with his defence of 5... Q-K2 was more fortunate. Both games are well worth study.

The unmanned lightship at the Outer Rock, near Laysan, on the west coast of Scotland, has a steel hull of extra strength, divided into three water-tight compartments, and carries two large steel gas-tanks. The powerful light, mounted in a lantern supported on a steel tower at a height of 25 feet above water-level, is visible from eight to twelve miles. The gas is stored in the tanks at a pressure of 150 to 180 pounds per square inch, is fed to the burners by an efficient regulating apparatus, and a single filling of the tanks can be depended upon to keep the light burning night and day for several months. A fog-bell is kept ringing by the gas as it passes to the burners.

Brain and nerve-poisons, such as morphine and atropine, are much less poisonous to animals than to man, states Prof. Y. K.
Clemens. In proportion to their weight dogs and horses can endure ten times as much morphine as man, while doves on stand 500 times and frogs even 1,000 times as much.
The herbivorous animals have the digestive tract of much greater length than the carnivorous. This causes the food to remain in the body several days instead of twenty-four hours, and the longer time for absorption into the blood probably explains why metallic poisons are much more fatal to the herbivorous than to the carnivorous animals.

Considering the world's timber supply, Dr.
Schlich has found that plenty of hard wood is still available, but that coniferous wood, which forms 85 per cent. of the total demand, can be continuously provided only by Sweden, Russia, and Canada. Russia's supply is precarious, while Sweden may meet one-sixth of the total demand.

The 150,000 tons of beet-root crushed in Germany in 1890 yielded but 5½ per cent. of raw sugar, while last year's 12,000,000 tons gave 13 per cent.

The world may still have fuel after the coal is gone, in the opinion of D. E. Hatchins, a Cape Colony scientist. The eucalyptus trees of South Africa and Australia have a wood-producing maximum fire time as great as that of German spruce, and the heating value of an equal bulk is three times as great. The annual fire-wood yield of an acre in South Africa thus appears to be fifteen times as great in heating power as that of an acre in the forest of Central Europe. Experiment has proven that on tropical mountains the growth of the eucalyptus may yield annually twenty tons of dry wood fuel per acre, fully equal in heating value to the same weight of coal, and it is reasonable to suppose that by selection this yield could be doubled. About 2,000 million acres out of the total 35,200 acres of land surface have sufficient rainfall and sun-heat for the growth of these trees. If one-half of this area were in for it, it seems possible to obtain the equivalent of 161,000 million tons of coal yearly, and with a forest area of only one-fourth, as at present in Germany, and an average forest yield of only one-half the present maximum, the output would still equal 20,175 million tons.
The latter amount is more than thirty times
the present consumption of coal.

Ballooning is now receiving attention as a possible remedy for pulmonary affections. The conditions are not the same as those of mountaineering, the change of altitude being more rapid and muscular fatigue, being absent. In the trips of the French Society of Physiology Dr. Renouveau proposes to regard the atmosphere as divided into three zones. Up to about three miles the surrounding air supplies all the oxygen needed, but beyond five miles are held to require a closed car, as was first suggested in 1871, or an aerial diving suit.

A novel type of storage-battery car, which in English tests has run 100 miles on a single charge, has motors that when travelling down hill are reversed and become generators for restoring the battery charge. An interesting feature of this change of motors into generators is a braking effect that is usually sufficient to check the car's speed without applying the mechanical brakes.

A new form of radiation, brought to notice by M. Albert Nodon, seems to have properties intermediate between those of X-rays and those of radium rays. It is produced on the dark side of a thin metallic plate when luminous or ultra-violet rays fall upon the opposite side, and it has the effect of discharging an electrified body—such as a brass globe—and set in a suitable box. The radiation does not seem to produce fluorescence or act upon a photographic plate. It penetrates wood and glass and differs from cathode rays in passing through metals and black cardboard.

An explanation of the influence of electric storms upon sufferers from nervous disease has been sought by A. Frederick Collins. A section of the brain of a freshly-killed animal was placed in circuit with a pair of resonators, a dry battery, and a telephone-receiver, and when electric waves were sent from an emitter ten feet away, cohesion of the brain cells momentarily resulted, reducing resistance, and giving a click in the telephone. The same effect was then obtained with a living brain, that of an etherized cat, the sound of cohesion being clear though feeble than before.

Alloys of aluminum and magnesium are known to work better than pure aluminum with certain tools, but they are less malleable and ductile. Some German metallurgists have discovered that the addition of two to ten per cent. of magnesium scarcely changes the appearance of the aluminum, but that this alloy is given new qualities after rolling several times at a temperature of 400 deg. to 500 deg. C. It can be cut and filed with the greatest facility, while it retains the ductility and malleability of pure aluminum.

Meat is cooking losses much bulk from evaporation—small pieces more than large. In late experiments, a piece of lean beef weighing a little more than a pound lost 45.6 per cent. in weight, but a piece just over five pounds was reduced only 39.8 per cent. Loss in nutrition is proportionately much less.

THE RATE OF WAGES.

This subject has afforded matter for dispute from the day when first one man hired another, and will probably continue to do so until we have developed into creatures as unlike that we are now as our present state is unlike that of the jellyfish. And yet, stripped of sentiment (with which it has really nothing to do), the case is simple enough. The labourer sells his labour for the most money he can get for it, and the capitalist sells his money for the most labour he can get for it, the natural rate of wages being found midway between these two antagonistic forces. But many will not have it, importing into the argument all sorts of irrelevant considerations.

It is the custom of a certain London merchant to refuse an increase of salary to an employee who presumes to ask for it, regarding any such request as impertinent, while those who don't ask he says don't need it. That merchant is difficult to deal with; yet there is a way to deal with him and his like. The employee who is full of energy, with a thorough mastery of the affairs entrusted to him, will never want for employment and fair pay. Where one employer will let him go, ten others will be eager to hold him, for there are none too many of his kind. Why are such men scarce? The answer is ready: Energy can co-exist only with health.
Take the case of Mr. August Janssen, of Karlsruhe Station, near Bay, N.S.W., an unquestionably industrious man who used to be laid aside from time to time. Writing on January 20, 1902, Mr. Janssen says: "Towards the close of 1899 we had extremely hot weather in this part of Australia, day after day the thermometer registering 105° to 120° Fahr.
in the shade. My occupation (that of station carpenter) compelled me to spend the greater portion of my time exposed to the scorching heat of the sun, a fact to which I attribute my subsequent sufferings. The first symptom was a sensation of weakness at the stomach on rising in the morning, and a distaste, almost amounting to a loathing, for food of whatever kind.
Then I became alarmed by acute pains in the region of the heart. The bowels, too, were very irregular in their action, extreme constipation alternating with violent purging. I could not eat, and for want of proper nourishment became so weak that I could hardly stand. Frequently I had to lay up entirely, neglecting my work for days at a time.

Each week marked a change for the worse in my condition, and to my other symptoms were soon added sick headaches and terrible pains about the chest, all of which made me nervous, low-spirited, and irritable. After ineffectually taking as much patent medicine as would fill a sleep tank, I placed myself in the care of a doctor, who informed me that I was suffering from acute indigestion, and that my nervous system was shattered. He attended me for twelve months, at the end of which time I was worse than when I first consulted him. I felt like a worn-out old man, and had not the strength of a ten-year-old lad. I began to think I was beyond the aid of medicine, when a friend of mine, who had used Steiner's Curative Syrup with much benefit, persuaded me to try it. I agreed, and found relief from almost the first dose. By the time I had taken two bottles I knew that I was fairly on the road to health. My strength returned much quicker than it had departed. Before the sixth bottle was emptied I was restored to a thoroughly healthy and robust condition, I could eat, sleep, and work with at distress or even discomfort. It is now six months since my cure was completed, when I gave up taking the Syrup regularly; but, as a precaution, I still take a couple of doses a very week. Many other persons in this district have taken it on my recommendation, and in no case has it failed."
